The Thing Inside St. Agnes

The Thing Inside St. Agnes

The Hook

St. Agnes Hospital has recorded an alarming increase in unexplained infant deaths over the past several months. Internal reviews have found no common medical cause, and staff have been quietly instructed not to discuss the cases.

Night-shift workers tell a different story.

Several janitors and nurses report hearing a woman singing lullabies in the neonatal ward late at night, often from rooms they know to be empty.

One janitor claims he saw her.

The Hook

Three people have been found dead in their homes over the past week. There are no signs of violence, poisoning, or forced entry, and none had any known medical condition that would explain their sudden deaths.

The only apparent connection is an unusual phone call shortly before each victim died.

One person may have survived.

Whatever you do, don't answer the phone.
